Are you adding a swimming pool/spa, storage building, retaining wall, landscape irrigation or deck/patio to your residential property? Finding out what the City requires to do this and more just got easier.

An Interactive House for Residential Development information page is now live on the City website. Everything that you can think of to add or change at your home is included on the interactive house. All you have to do is click on the specific item, such as storage building, and you will be linked to a page that tells you what you need to submit in order to get a building permit, and also has links to all of the necessary forms and regulations.

The items covered under residential development include antenna, barns/garage/pool house, building sewer, carport, deck/patio, deck/patio cover, electric service box, fence, garage conversion, heater or air conditioning unit, kennel (permanently covered), landscape irrigation, new/remodel a SF7 home (home on a 7,000 square foot lot), retaining wall, sidewalk, storage building, storm shelter, swimming pool/spa, garage conversion, water heater, water supply, and window.

Check out the Interactive House by going to the City website, www.burlesontx.com, I Want To, Build or Construct Something. For more information, call the Building Permits and Inspections Department at 817-426-9611.
