The Burleson Public Library is ramping up its online services to bring high quality information to the community 24 hours a day, seven days a week. With free language learning, auto repair manuals, business resources, books for Kindles, children's digital books, and more, there is something for everyone.

"Our virtual branch is an important part of our goal to make library services as convenient as possible for our patrons," said Sara Miller, public services supervisor for the library. "We have carefully selected and purchased some of the best digital resources we could find and made them available for free to library patrons online. The response from the public has been tremendous."
