Homeschoolers, this open house is for you!

The Burleson Public Library is hosting an open house for homeschoolers on Saturday, May 17, 12 p.m.-2 p.m. The event will kick off with a presentation geared to those who are considering homeschooling. Immediately following, a presentation will be given to showcase library resources available to homeschoolers such as the youth robotics lab, available online databases, the interlibrary loan system, and more.

Marc Marchand, director of library services for the City, says that as the interest in homeschooling continues to grow the City's library is positioned to help families be successful.

"Whether a child is in public school, private school, or homeschool, we want to help parents be their child's first teacher. Having access to quality learning materials and the ability to network with one another is critical. Through Library resources and programming, parents and children have an opportunity to learn not only from books but from one another. Hosting an open house is a great way to help families connect, learn, and grow."

For more information about the May 17 open house, call the Burleson Public Library at 817-426-9207. The library is located at 248 S.W. Johnson Ave.
