McLane Classic Foods breaks ground on headquarters in Burleson

McLane Classic Foods along with state and city officials broke ground on their 157,951-square-foot headquarters and food processing facility at HighPoint Business Park East today.

McLane Classic Foods groundbreaking Jan. 22

“The entire Burleson community is excited to welcome McLane Classic Foods,” said Burleson’s Mayor, Ken Shetter, during the groundbreaking ceremony. “We, in Burleson, are dedicated to working with this great corporate partner as they build their new headquarters and develop their workforce.”

“We are excited to watch McLane Classic Foods flourish and become part of the Burleson community,” stated Don Nicholas, field representative for Congressman Roger Williams. “Adding McLane Classic Foods only makes the Burleson community, a community entrenched in family-oriented values and great economic growth, even better.”

McLane Classic Foods, a part of the McLane Group, specializes in manufacturing custom developed and prepared soups, sauces and side dishes for national restaurant chains, including Potbelly Sandwich Shops, Denny’s, Panera Bread and Logan’s Roadhouse.

“We are excited to break ground and cannot wait to begin work on our new headquarters,” said Drayton McLane III from the McLane Group. “The Burleson team made the hard decision of finding a new location into a very easy one.”

“There is no comparison that Burleson was heads and shoulders above other cities we visited,” stated Chris Horan, McLane Classic Foods CEO. “Many of our employees and the ones we will attract will make their homes in Burleson. This is a great day for the McLane’s and the City of Burleson.”

McLane Classic Foods will be relocating their headquarters and manufacturing facility from Fort Worth, where it has been located since 1992, to Burleson bringing with them 40 jobs to the Burleson community and $30 million in capital investment. The project will hopefully be opening their doors in the first quarter of 2019.
